

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ADDRESS OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

1802.

LUKE HANSARD, PRINTER, GREAT TURNSTILE, LINCOLN'S-INN FIELDS.

A D D R E S S
OF THE
HOUSE OF COMMONS OF GREAT BRITAIN
TO

EXTRACTED FROM THE VOTES,
Veneris, 11^o die Julii, Anno 40^o Georgii 3ⁱⁱⁱ Regis, 1800.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, YOUR MAJESTY'S most dutiful and loyal Subjects, the Commons of Great Britain in Parliament assembled, having taken into our Consideration the State of the Public Records of this Kingdom, and the Necessity of providing for the better Arrangement, Preservation, and more convenient Use of the same, humbly beg leave to lay before Your Majesty the Report of our Proceedings thereon; and to represent to Your Majesty, that in several of the principal Offices we have found the Public Records preserved with great Order and Regularity, and in some few, with a Method and Care which are exemplary; but that, in many of the most important Offices, they are wholly unarranged, undescribed, and unascertained; that some of them are exposed to Erasure, Alteration, and Embezzlement, and others are lodged in Places where they are daily perishing by Damp, or incurring a continual Risk of Destruction by Fire.

A Period of nearly Seventy Years has elapsed since the last General Parliamentary Inquiry upon this Subject; and, during this Interval of Time, the Change which has taken place in the Language and written Character of Judicial Proceedings, as well as the large Accumulation of Materials which has been progressively superadded in every Department, have increased the Difficulties of methodizing the several Repositories, or applying their Contents to Purposes of practical Use.

In the Course of our Inquiry; we have found that many of the Public Buildings allotted to these Uses, and especially those Buildings which belong to Your Majesty's Exchequer in all its Branches, comprehending the ancient Records and Muniments of the Rights and Possessions of the Crown, and the Vouchers and Accounts of the Public Revenues and Expenditure, are in a State so incommodious and insecure, as to require immediate Attention.

It has also appeared to us, that the salutary Measures heretofore adopted by Your Majesty's Authority, for methodizing the Contents of some of the principal Repositories of Your Majesty's Records and Papers of State, might also be extended to many other Repositories, with Consequences highly beneficial to the Public Service.

And the same Motives which encouraged our Predecessors to intreat Your Majesty's Directions for printing the ancient Records of Domesday, and the Rolls of Parliament, have b also

also induced us to submit to Your Majesty's Wisdom, our Desire of extending the same Measure to other ancient and valuable Monuments of our History, Laws, and Government.

Your faithful Commons do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty, that You will be graciously pleased to give such Directions as Your Majesty, in Your great Wisdom, shall think fit, for the better Preservation, Arrangement, and more convenient Use of the Public Records of this Kingdom.

And we beg leave further to assure Your Majesty, that whatever extraordinary Expenses may be incurred by the Directions which Your Majesty, in Your great Wisdom, shall think fit to give on this Occasion, shall be cheerfully provided for and made good by Your faithful Commons.

Jovis, 17^o die Julii;

Anno 40^o Georgii 3^{ui} Regis, 1800.

Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer reported to the House, That their Address of Friday last (that His Majesty would be graciously pleased to give such Directions as He shall think fit, for the better Preservation, Arrangement, and more convenient Use of the Public Records of this Kingdom; and to assure His Majesty, that whatever extraordinary Expenses may be incurred by the Directions which His Majesty shall think fit to give on this Occasion, shall be made good by His faithful Commons) had been presented to His Majesty; and that His Majesty had commanded him to acquaint this House, that He will give Directions as desired by the said Address.

COMMISSION

For executing the Measures recommended by the House of Commons respecting the PUBLIC RECORDS OF THE KINGDOM.

G E O R G E R.

And, to the end that Our Royal Will and Pleasure in the Premises may be executed with the greater Regularity and Expedition, We farther by these Presents will and command, and do hereby give full Power and Authority to you, or any Three or more of you, to nominate and appoint from Time to Time such Person of Ability, Care, and Diligence, as ye shall think fit, to be and act as your Clerk or Secretary, for the Purpose of aiding you in the Execution of these Presents; and also to nominate and appoint in like Manner such several Persons of Ability, Care, and Diligence, as ye may think fit, to be Sub-Commissioners, to be employed under your Direction and Controul in the Premises, and more especially to methodize, regulate, and digest the Records, Rolls, Instruments, Books, and Papers, in any of Our Public Offices and Repositories; and to cause such of the said Records, Rolls, Instruments, Books, and Papers, as are decayed, and in Danger of being destroyed, to be bound and secured; and to make exact Calendars and Indexes thereof; and to superintend the printing of such Calendars and Indexes, and original Records and Papers, as ye shall cause to be printed: Which said Clerk or Secretary, and Sub-Commissioners, and every of them, shall and may be removed by you, or any Three of you, from Time to Time, at your Will and Pleasure, full Power and Authority being hereby given to you to appoint others in their Places respectively.

And Our further Will and Pleasure is, That ye, or any Three or more of you, do and shall, on or before the 25th Day of March, in the Year of our Lord 1801, and so from Year to Year,

Year, on or before the 25th Day of March in each Year respectively, so long as this Commission shall continue in force, certify unto Us in Our Privy Council, under your Hands and Seals respectively, all and every of the several Proceedings of yourselves and of the said Sub-Commissioners had by virtue of these Presents, together with such other Matters (if any) as may be deserving of Our Royal Consideration touching or concerning the Premises, and what further Measures (if any) ye shall think fit to propose thereupon.

O R D E R.

At a Board of the Commissioners appointed by His Majesty for carrying into Execution the Measures recommended by the House of Commons respecting the Public Records of the Kingdom, &c.

Holden at the House of the Right Honourable the Speaker of the House of Commons, the 22d Day of July 1800 :

The Right Honourable the SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS,
The Right Honourable SYLVESTER DOUGLAS,
Sir JOHN MITFORD, Knight, His Majesty's Attorney General,
Sir WILLIAM GRANT, Knight, His Majesty's Solicitor General,
CHARLES ABBOT, Esquire ;

It was Ordered, That the Secretary do write to the Trustees of the British Museum, to express the Desire of this Board, that the Catalogue of the Manuscripts in the Cottonian Library, lately compiled by their Principal Librarian, may be forthwith printed.

By Order of the Board of Commissioners,

John Topham, Secretary.

P R E F A C E.

THE high estimation in which the Cottonian Library has ever been held by all persons competent to appreciate its value, is amply evinced, not only by the multitude of testimonies of learned men, who have had opportunities to notice its intrinsic value, and real importance; but more so by the great solicitude that has at all times been shewn by the Legislature for its safe custody and preservation, as well whilst it continued in the possession of the illustrious family from whom it had its origin, as since it became the property of the Public.

To enumerate the many unequivocal encomiums which have from its first establishment been bestowed upon this Library, by men of the first eminence in most branches of literature, would not only exceed the limits of this introduction, but also prove in some measure superfluous, since an ample detail of them has already been laid before the public by the learned compiler of its Catalogue, published in the year 1696*. In addition however to those honourable testimonies, it may not be improper to suggest, that during the above-mentioned period, scarce a writer on the antiquities, the laws, the constitution, and the history of this country, has neglected to avail himself of the many authentic documents deposited in this important collection: And that among our contemporaries, no one hardly ever thinks of engaging in any work or enquiry of that nature, without having recourse to the abundant information he is likely to derive from the contents of this repository.

Independently of these claims to general approbation, it is also to be observed that a great number of legal evidences are here preserved, which have often contributed, and will no doubt hereafter be frequently called for, to determine important questions concerning titles, honours, descents, estates, prerogatives, and immunities; and cannot hence be considered as trivial by numbers of individuals, who may be involved in causes of the above description, especially in a country where the security of property is one of the main pillars of the state.

Had not Dr. Smith at the beginning of his above-mentioned Catalogue, the Editors of the Biographia Britannica†, the ingenious Author of the History and Antiquities of Leicestershire‡, and various other late Biographical writers§, given very circumstantial accounts of the life of Sir Robert Cotton, the founder of this Library, and of the origin, progress, and most eminent merits of his collection, a circumstantial detail of these particulars would no doubt have been expected in this place. But although an ample statement of this nature may now be deemed superfluous, yet as most of those who may have occasion to consult this Catalogue, will probably think that a very short epitome of what has already been delivered on that subject, may be necessary as an introduction to the additional facts which are to be here stated respecting the History of the Library; and the motives of the present publication, the following very concise sketch of the Founder's life, will it is hoped not prove wholly unacceptable to the reader.

* Dr. Thomas Smith.

‡ Vol. ii. p. ii. pag. 834. seq.

§ New and General Biographical Dictionary; Gentleman's Magazine, &c.

Sir Robert Cotton, a descendant from a very ancient family, which in the reign of Edward III. flourished in the county of Chester, was born at Denton, near Conington, in Huntingdonshire, on the 22d of January 1570. He was entered at Trinity College, Cambridge, where in 1585, he took the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and where he early imbibed a taste for, and laid the foundation of his preeminent learning in the History and Antiquities of his country. This bias, on his leaving college, was greatly increased and confirmed by the free intercourse he immediately commenced with the celebrated antiquaries, Joscelin, Lambard, Camden, Noel, and several others, who about that time (though as yet unsuccessfully) attempted to establish a Society for the Investigation of British Antiquities. Animated by the example of these assiduous collectors, he neglected no opportunity (of which abundance offered at that time) to acquire a number of chronicles, chartularies, and other original muniments, which at the late dissolution of the monasteries had found their way into the hands of private persons, who in general were by no means aware of their real importance. In these endeavours he was surpassed by none, nor was he in fact equalled by any of his emulous contemporaries, most of whom ultimately co-operated to increase the stock he was accumulating for the benefit of his country.

In 1599, he accompanied his friend William Camden in a journey to the north of England, where they jointly explored the whole extent of the Picts wall, and brought away several inscriptions and monuments, which, after having been some time deposited at Sir Robert's seat at Conington, were presented to Trinity College Cambridge, where they are still carefully preserved.

At the accession of K. James I. in 1603, he was knighted; and one of his female ancestors, Maria de Welshenham, the Wife of William Cotton, his fifth progenitor, being descended from the family of the Bruces in Scotland, the King usually honoured him with the appellation of Cousin. And we accordingly find that he ever after usually subjoined the name of Bruce to that of Cotton, and caused the royal arms of Scotland to be added to his own armorial bearings.

In the year 1608, he was appointed one of the Commissioners for enquiring into the State of the Navy. And in 1611, having been the principal promoter of the plan for the establishment of the order of Baronets, he was himself raised to that rank, being created the 36th in succession at the first nomination.

After having been, during upwards of 30 years, a distinguished ornament to his country, and the principal oracle to which men in the highest stations resorted for accurate information and advice in all matters relating to the history, the rights, and the constitution of the kingdom, during which period he produced upwards of thirty tracts or dissertations, chiefly on political and constitutional subjects, most of them written at the desire of men in power, if not at the express command of his sovereign; it is no doubt greatly to be lamented that a life so meritorious should, towards its close, have been embittered by base calumny, and the arbitrary proceedings of those from whom he had an undoubted right to expect distinguished favour and protection.

When in the year 1615 Robert Carr, whom the king's favour had rapidly raised to the rank of earl of Somerset, became implicated in the charge of having been accessory to the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, the earl having ever since his exaltation been in habits of intimacy with Sir Robert Cotton, had immediate recourse to him both for advice and assistance in his perplexity, and thereby drew upon his friend a suspicion of connivance, if not of interference, from which he was called upon to clear himself before the Privy Council. He was even committed to the custody of an alderman of London; nor, although nothing could be proved against him, was he released from this confinement till five months after, when the whole affair was terminated by the pardon the king was pleased to grant to the earl, and to the countess of Essex.

About the same time, the unpardonable inadvertency, or rather the execrable perfidy of Gondemar the Spanish ambassador, drew on Sir Robert Cotton another imputation, of which however the calumniator soon found it necessary to acquit him by his own unqualified confession. A list he suffered to go abroad of persons who had secretly received pecuniary gratuities at his hands for sinister purposes, was found to contain the ever venerable name of Sir Robert; but being called upon from authority, either to prove or contradict the opprobrious charge, he revoked his declaration by asserting that one of his secretaries had unawares inserted the name in the list. Although Sir Robert's honour was perfectly vindicated vindicated in both these instances, yet such transactions, in a mind so upright as his, could not fail to cause much agitation, and to disturb the tranquillity of a life addicted to none but useful and laudable pursuits. On one of these occasions this excellent character had the mortification of seeing himself for a time excluded from his own library; the Privy Council, by whose order it was locked up, deeming its contents of too great importance to be exposed in the manner in which the liberal Owner suffered them to be inspected. From a commission of James I. dated Oct. 26, 1615, for the examination of Sir Robert Cotton, on a charge of having communicated the valuable state papers in his Library to the Spanish ambassador, who had caused them to be copied and translated into the Spanish tongue, we have reason to conclude that this circumstance happened on the latter of these occasions.

The anxiety to which these transactions must have given rise, was however trifling, compared to what he must have felt, when, either by the neglect or the dishonesty of persons in whom he had placed confidence, another suspicion arose against him, which for a time deprived him of the favour of his sovereign, once more excluded him from the use of his Library, and according to his own declaration greatly contributed to abridge his days. In 1629, a tract was handed about in MS. entitled "A project how a prince may make himself an absolute tyrant." The enquiries that were immediately made for the author of so pernicious a performance led at length to the Cottonian Library. Sir Robert, perfectly conscious of his innocence, made strict enquiry into the transaction, and soon found that a copy of this tract, written at Florence in 1613, by Robert Dudley D. of Northumberland, under the less exceptionable Title of "Propositions for his majesty's service to bridle the impertinency of Parliaments," had, unknown to him, found its way into his Library; that, likewise without his knowledge, his Librarian or Amanuensis had, as is suspected for pecuniary considerations, suffered one or more copies of it to be taken, under the former of these titles, and thus drew the fatal imputation to fall upon one who, though perfectly free from guilt, could not long survive a suspicion so injurious though so groundless. Although he completely vindicated his innocence of having written or disseminated a tract so destructive to the liberties of the people, of which he had ever shewn himself a most zealous friend and advocate, yet under the renewed pretence that his Library was not of a nature to be exposed to public inspection, it was again put in sequestration, and himself once more excluded from all access to it. What effect this must have had upon his wounded mind may easily be gathered from the visible decline of his health ever after, frequently declaring to his friends, "that they had broken his heart who had locked up his Library from him." Shortly before his death, he caused to be signified to the Privy Council "that their so long detaining his books from him, without rendering any reason for the same, had been the cause of his mortal malady." He died on the 6th of May 1631, aged 60 years 3 months and 15 days, and was buried on the south side of the church of Conington, where a suitable monument was erected to his ever revered memory.

That his Library continued in sequestration some time after his death, appears manifest from the petition of Sir Thomas Cotton his only son and heir, wherein he states that his study had been a long time locked up, and himself debarred from the use of it; and that it appearing from a schedule of the contents of the said Library prepared for the purpose*, that there were no books or papers therein, but such as were the undoubted property of the petitioner, he therefore humbly prayed that he might henceforth have the free use of his study, it being the best room in his house.

Although no record appears to be extant that the prayer of this petition was complied with, yet there is every reason to believe that it was soon after granted; and that Sir Thomas, to whom the property had devolved, continued to the day of his death, which happened in the year 1662, in quiet possession of his Library.

We are informed by Stukeley, that ——— Bromfall, Esquire, of Blunham in Bedfordshire, high sheriff for the county of Bedford in the year 1650, was greatly instrumental in preserving this inestimable treasure, during the convulsions of the civil wars, in which all documents of a constitutional and legal nature were industriously sought after, in order to be destroyed †.

* A large roll on vellum now extant in the Library, which contains a compendious Catalogue of the same, digested in a systematic order, is probably the above-mentioned Schedule, which is said in the Petition to have been compiled by Mr. Dickinson. From a transcript of this Roll, given him by Mr. Asle, Mr. S. Hooper printed the 2vo. edition of the Catalogue, which he published in the year 1777.

† V. Stukeley Itin. Curios. p. 74. The Library appears to have been then deposited at Stratton in Bedfordshire, to which place it was probably removed for the sake of security; Sir Thomas's eldest son, afterwards Sir John Cotton, having married Dorothy, heiress of Edmund Anderfon, Esq; of that place.

Sir Thomas Cotton was succeeded by Sir John his eldest son, and he too appears to have been never molested in the free enjoyment of his Library. During the latter part of his life he readily permitted Dr. Thomas Smith to compile the Catalogue of the collection, which was printed at Oxford in the year 1696*.

The next, and respecting the public, the most important transaction concerning this Library, is recorded in the statute made in the year 1700†, entitled “An Act for the better settling and preserving the Library kept in the house at Westminster called Cotton House, in the name and family of the Cottons for the benefit of the public.” This act, after doing ample justice to Sir Robert Cotton for forming a most valuable collection of manuscripts, papers, records, &c‡. “of great use and service for the knowledge and preservation of our constitution in church and state, and generally esteemed the best of its kind now any where extant;” and reciting that the same had been carefully preserved, and much augmented and enlarged by Sir Thomas the son, and Sir John the grandson of the said Sir Robert Cotton, declares “that the said Sir John Cotton, in pursuance of the desire and intentions of his father and grandfather, is content and willing that his mansion house and Library should continue in his family and name, and that it be kept and preserved by the name of the Cottonian Library, for public use and advantage.”

After this preamble, so honourable to the collectors, and so decisive in favour of the utility and importance of the collection, the statute enacts, that after Sir John Cotton's death, the said Library, together with his mansion-house and its appurtenances be vested in trustees; the house, for the use of the descendants of Sir Robert Cotton, the founder, for ever; and the Library to be carefully preserved for the public use, without suffering any alienation or embezzlement upon any account whatever.

The first concern of the trustees appointed by this act was to cause the Library to be carefully inspected in order to ascertain and identify its contents, that they might render the keeper whom they were to appoint to the care of it, responsible for the security of the same. For this purpose they named Matthew Hutton, John Ansie, and Humphrey Wanley, three of the most eminent antiquaries of those days, to examine carefully into the state of it, and report to them concerning its extent and state of preservation. This report, dated June 22d, 1703, is extant in manuscript in the British Museum, from which it appears that they compared all the volumes in the Library with the entries in Dr. Smith's Catalogue, and ascertained the number of pages in each volume; but that being limited for time, they did not make any material corrections in the said Catalogue, which they acknowledged to be in several places materially defective. They likewise represented many of the volumes to be in a state of decay, and the place where the Library was kept not altogether calculated for its preservation.

The solicitude of the legislature to have this important collection effectually secured for the use of the public, induced them soon after to frame a new statute, entitled “An Act for the better securing her majesty's purchase of Cotton House in Westminster §,” in which, after reciting that the Library, in its present situation, was by no means in the state of security, nor of the degree of utility it was intended to be; it was provided that “to the intent so great a treasure of books and manuscripts, so generously given for the public service, might not remain any longer useless; and that it might be in her majesty's power to make this most valuable collection useful to her own subjects, and to all learned strangers;” an agreement had been made with Sir John Cotton, grandson to the Donor, for the purchase of the inheritance of the house where the Library was deposited, || for the sum of £. 4,500, which purchase could not have been made without an act of parliament, the preceding act concerning this Library having directed that the house should not be sold or alienated: and that the said house be henceforth vested in the queen, her heirs and successors for ever.

Whether it was for the purpose of erecting a new building for the reception of the Library on the site of the said house, which indeed was directed by the last-mentioned act, or for what other reason, does not at present appear; but we are informed in a subsequent report of a Committee of the House of Commons, that the Library was in the year 1712 removed to Essex House in Essex Street Strand, where it continued to the year 1730, when it was conveyed back to Westminster, and deposited in a house in Little Dean's Yard, purchased by the Crown of the lord Ashburnham.

* The Books were deposited in 14 presses, over which were placed the Busts of the 12 Cæsars, and of Cleopatra and Faustina, whence the press-marks given to the Volumes in its several Catalogues, which have necessarily been retained to this day.

† 12 and 13 Will. III. c. 7.

‡ Besides the Library of Manuscripts, this Repository contained also a considerable number of valuable Coins, chiefly Saxon and old English, and several antiquities, Roman and English, all which are now incorporated in the Collections of the British Museum.

§ 5 Anne, c. 30.

|| This house, situate behind a part of the House of Commons, is still called Cotton House, and is now converted into a residence for the chief clerk of the House of Commons.

Here

Here shortly after, viz. on the 23d of October, 1731, in the morning, a fire broke out, which destroyed several, and damaged many of the manuscripts, and was near proving fatal to the whole Library: what remained was removed, by permission of the Dean and Chapter, into a new building designed for the dormitory of Westminster school; and the trustees (particularly Mr. Speaker Onslow, who instantly upon hearing of the fire, hastened to the spot, and personally assisted in rescuing all that could be saved from the flames) immediately took the most effectual steps in their power for retrieving as much of the damage as could be repaired. They took the opinion of several of the most experienced officers entrusted with public records, concerning the best expedients in this emergency, and proceeded in the manner suggested by them in redressing the injury. Nor was the House of Commons inattentive to this misfortune, since we find a report of a Committee appointed by them to view the Cottonian Library, and other public records of the kingdom, dated May 9, 1732, in which an ample account is given of the accident itself, and of the measures that were adopted in consequence of the damage it occasioned. To this report is likewise added an appendix, shewing at large what manuscripts had been wholly destroyed or materially injured, that persons who may be possessed of copies of them, might have an opportunity of contributing to the reparation of the loss, by communicating those transcripts.

When at length, in the year 1753, the legislature was induced by the will of Sir Hans Sloane, Baronet, to purchase his extensive collection of Natural and Artificial Curiosities, and to establish a National Repository under the name of the British Museum, it did not escape them, how valuable and important an addition the Cottonian Library would be to an establishment of such great public utility. The act therefore made in that year, after reciting the weighty motives that prompted them thereto, directed that the said Library be deposited in the above mentioned Museum; and that two trustees, to be nominated in succession by the representatives of the Cotton family, be for ever added to those appointed by this act, for the execution of the purposes thereof*.

* The following TABLE of the Descent and present Representatives of the COTTON FAMILY, will, it is hoped, not be unacceptable to the reader, who must surely feel much interested in a Progeny from which the public derives such essential advantages:

We gather from this Table that Francis Annesley, Esq. member of parliament for Reading, is at present the lineal representative of the elder branch of the Cotton family; in consequence of which he, and by his nomination, Sir George Cornewall, Baronet, his cousin by marriage, are at this time the Cottonian trustees of the British Museum. Mr. Annesley, in right of his great grandmother Frances, daughter of Sir George Downing, Baronet, is likewise the representative of that distinguished family, to whom the Public are indebted for the liberal foundation of a College at Cambridge, the mastership of which has been conferred on Mr. Annesley in the charter lately granted for carrying into execution the intentions of the testator.

It remains now to lay before the public what steps the Curators of the British Museum have taken in order to fulfil the intentions of the Founder, the Donor, and the Legislature, respecting this important part of their trust.—After causing the Library to be carefully deposited in a safe and conspicuous part of the department of Manuscripts, they being aware that much remained yet to be done, in order to render it as useful as the nature of its contents would admit of, were pleased in the year 1793, to direct the keeper of that department (an office then held by me) to take every step that might be deemed advisable to restore such of the damaged volumes as were thought yet capable of some further repairs, and the imperfection of Smith's Repertory having been repeatedly complained of, to prepare a new and more accurate Catalogue without delay. The following account of the manner in which I endeavoured to acquit myself of this task, will at the same time convey the best idea I can give of the present State of the Library.

This Library, which originally consisted of 958 volumes, was by the above-mentioned fire in the year 1731, reduced to 861 volumes, of which, when brought to the Museum, 105 were damaged bundles preserved in cases. Many of the volumes in bindings were not paged at all; and few indeed were paged with accuracy. In several of them there were evident marks that leaves had been purloined; and some had been bound up with much irregularity and disorder. Concerning the bundles in cases, the Committee of the House of Commons, who, in the year 1732, examined into the damage occasioned by the fire, reported that several of them might, in careful hands, be so far restored as to be rendered useful. But this was afterwards rendered a task of much greater difficulty; the persons by whom they had been occasionally handled, having thrown them into great, and in many instances irretrievable, confusion.

With respect to Dr. Smith's Catalogue, the number of articles entered in it, does not much exceed 6,200, which it will be seen hereafter is not a fourth part of the contents of these 861 volumes. The chief omissions are in the State Papers and Collections of small detached Tracts, of which there are no less than 170 volumes. Most of these are entered only as single articles, whereas upon an average each of them contains, at least 100 distinct pieces. About 80 of these volumes, as Sir Wm. Dugdale informs us in his life*, were by him found in loose bundles, and caused to be bound up, but unfortunately without any order as to persons, times, or matter; whence it follows that they have been hitherto little used, because little known, and almost inaccessible for want of proper calendars.

Many of the other articles, especially the Biblical Books, Liturgies, Chronicles, &c. have, it must be owned, been described with sufficient accuracy, so as to leave little room for emendation. But in other instances, the learned compiler has inadvertently suffered such mistakes to escape him, as rendered a careful examination of the whole Catalogue indispensably necessary. These defects were noticed, and in a few instances supplied, by Mr. David Casley, in an Appendix to his Catalogue of the king's Library of MSS. The learned Humphrey Wanley, observing in how jejune and superficial a manner the Saxon MSS. had been described, drew up very ample accounts of them, which have been published in the 2d volume of Hicks's Thesaurus: and several other men of learning have since pointed out and lamented many instances of omission and inaccuracy, which greatly diminish the utility of the Catalogue. Among the more striking of these imperfections are the ascribing to Chaucer a volume of poems by Hampole and others; the entering Lydgate's Siege of Troy as an anonymous poem; Comestor's Bible Historiaux as a common French version of the Bible; Marbodæus de Gemmis as a work of Evax king of Arabia, &c.

My first care, on entering upon my task, was to cause all the volumes to be regularly paged, or at least the old paging to be accurately ascertained, without however obliterating the old numbers, since that would have proved fatal to the many references that have been made to these MSS. I then proceeded to examine the bundles in cases, and found means, after many repeated and not a few unsuccessful attempts, to arrange several volumes and parts of volumes of State Papers. Some of the shrivelled MSS. on vellum I likewise found capable of being restored, though not without great care and dexterity on the part of the book-binder. With his assistance I have succeeded in restoring 51 of the above 105 damaged MSS. which are now bound in 44 volumes: and though several of these be still defective, especially where parts have been consumed or defaced by fire; yet upon the whole it will be found that much useful and authentic information is still preserved in them. The remaining 61 bundles have appeared to me irretrievable; and indeed most of them seem to be obscure tracts and fragments of little or no importance. They are now contained in 62 cases.

This done, I applied myself to the compilation of the Catalogue. And here each separate article has been entered in its successive order*, under as short and yet comprehensive a title as could be devised, which, especially in the multitude of letters and tracts in a great variety of antiquated languages and hand-writings, and without either argument or rubrics, was attended with no small degree of difficulty and labour. Particular pains have been taken to discover the true authors of anonymous and pseudonymous works; in many instances, especially in anonymous poems, the first lines have been transcribed in the Catalogue in order to identify the piece. Notice has been taken of those works that have been published, and references have been made to the titles of the publications, or to the collections in which they have been edited. All possible endeavours have been used to ascertain the dates of the Letters and State Papers, where (as has but too often been the case in the last and the preceding century) the writers have omitted them; and even approximations, with marks of interrogation, have been inserted where the exact dates could not be obtained. The folio of each article has been entered; and the number of folios in each volume has been noted, both in the Catalogue and at the end of the volume, in hopes thereby to prevent all future mutilation, or at least to lay it open to detection. The form of each volume, the material on which it is written, and its age, if prior to the 15th century, when it could be ascertained with any degree of probability, have likewise been described in the Catalogue.

This Catalogue, thus drawn up with all the industry and circumspection of which I was capable, will be found to contain about 26,000 articles. That in the variety and perplexity of research implied in so intricate a maze of latent facts, no errors should have escaped my best endeavours will hardly be expected, especially by those who are apprized that in the opinion of the best bibliographers, no work of this nature, certainly none executed by one single person, and one moreover incessantly distracted by a variety of other avocations, has ever been produced free from imperfections. But it is hoped that these imperfections however numerous, will not materially affect the utility of the performance.

This Catalogue remained in manuscript in the Library till last year, when a Committee of the House of Commons for enquiring into the State of the Records of the Kingdom, having ordered a Report concerning the Contents of the British Museum respecting the objects of their researches, were necessarily informed of its existence; and having been apprized by competent judges that its publication might prove an object of much utility, recommended to the Commission appointed by His Majesty for carrying into effect the proposals of the said Committee, that the printing of it be proceeded upon without delay. The documents relating to this transaction are, by order of the Commission, prefixed to this Preface. The directions given in consequence of this recommendation are now finally executed. And the Public, it is hoped, will acknowledge that no endeavours have been wanting in all those concerned in the care and management of this Library, which may render it of the greatest possible utility.

* It is with great reluctance that the intention of digesting the Catalogue into a systematic order has been relinquished; the number of articles that could not possibly be reduced under particular classes being so great, that nothing more satisfactory in this respect could have been produced, than what is afforded by Hooper's above-mentioned Catalogue. A copious Index, on which more than ordinary pains have been bestowed, will, it is hoped, in some measure supply this want of systematic arrangement.

 Sec. XV.

1. Johannis Gower Chronica, quæ "Vox clamantis" dicitur: five poema de insurrectione rusticorum contra ingenuos et nobiles, tempore R. Ricardi II. et de causis ex quibus talia contingunt enormia: libris septem. 1.

On the back of fol. 8. is a curious painting of a man in the dress of the 15th century, with a bow and arrow in his hand, ready to shoot at a sphere. Above are the following lines:

"Ad mundum mitto mea jacula dumque sagitto,
 "At ubi justus erit nulla sagitta ferit:
 "Sed male viventes hos vulnere transgredientes,
 "Conscius ergo sibi se speculetur ibi."

Mr. Strutt takes the above for a portrait of Gower, and has engraved and published it as such in his Regal and Ecclesiastical Antiquities, where he says that the original is all of one colour, viz. dark brown: the fact is that the drapery is blue, and the other parts are of different colours.

2. Chronica tripartita (an ejusdem J. Gower?) de depositione Ricardi II. et coronatione R. Henrici IV. metrica. Hi versus præmittuntur. 152.

"Ista tripartita sequitur que mente perita
 "Cronica servetur; nam pars quæ prima videtur
 "Est opus humanum; pars illa secunda prophanum
 "Est opus inferni; pars tertia jure supernum
 "Est opus in Christo: vir qui bene sentit in isto
 "Scire potest mira; quid amor sit quid sit et ira.
 "Est tamen hoc clamor, omnia vincit amor."

3. Carmen, unde magnificus rex noster Henricus prænotatus apud Deum et homines cum omni benedictione glorificetur. 166.

Incip. "O recolende bone pie rex Henrice patrone,
 "Ad bona dispone quos eripis à Pharaone."

5. Carmen super multiplici vitiorum pestilentia, unde tempore Ricardi II. partes nostræ specialius inficiebantur. 167.

Incip. "Non excusatur qui verum non fateatur,
 "Ut sic ponatur modus unde fides recolatur."

 "Scribere delicta nequeo quæ sunt mihi dicta."

Incip. "O sexus fragilis, ex quo natura virilis
 "Oarnea (sic) procedit, anime que robora legit."

9. Contra mundi fallaciam, in causa perjurii et avaritiæ. metrica. 170. b.

Incip. "Sunt duo cognati vitiorum confociati
 "Orbem qui ledunt pariter, nec ab orbe recedunt."

10. Tractatus de lucis scrutinio. metrica. 171. b.

Incip. "Heu quia per crebras humus est vitata tenebras,
 "Vix iter humanum locus ullus habet sibi planum."

Frustrum, capsula asservatum.

A volume on parchment, which once consisted of 272 leaves, written about the XIV century, containing eight tracts, the principal of which was a "Register of William Cratfield, abbot of St. Edmund." The whole is so damaged by fire as to be scarcely of any use. Casley mentions that Dr. Pepush had copies of the 3, 4, and 5 tracts, being on music; probably also of one between N° 3 and 4, being a treatise of Egidius de Muris, which Smith had omitted in his printed catalogue.—N. B. The copies of N° 3, 4, and 5, have since been presented to the Brit. Mus. by S^r John Hawkins: v. Aysc. Catal. N° 4909.

It formerly consisted of 341 leaves, and contained 157 articles, enumerated in Smith's catalogue, being all lives of British faints, said to have been collected by John of Tinmouth, in the year 1366, and to have been extracted by John Capgrave.

N. B. This volume and the next (Calig. D. II.) which had been much damaged by the fire in 1731, have until now been kept in cases in loose sheets. Many articles have by this means been lost, and the whole was thrown into the greatest disorder. What remains has now been arranged, and the original paging has been preserved, a few sheets excepted, whose proper places it has been impossible to ascertain. This is mentioned in order to account for the deficiencies that occur.
